25,000 Against 250,000.

London, June 1.—The Boer powers of resistance have weakened so unexpectedly and the British successes have been so rapid and complete that this theory helps to explain what is happening in South Africa.

Possibly a more accurate summary of the case would be the simple statement that from 15,000 to 20,000 burghers have found the onrush of an army of 250,000 British soldiers irresistible and have abandoned a hopeless undertaking.
